Masters in ENGLISH

Studying for an MA in English is a challenging and rewarding experience. You will receive training and mentorship from faculty who are internationally acclaimed for teaching and research. The English program at MCH is distinctive for its emphasis on developing mature literary and cultural sensibilities by employing the most contemporary scholarship.

A wordsmith echoes through cultures and generations.

The English Faculty demonstrates keen depth and diversity – from literary modernism and popular culture to theatre and graphic narratives. Moving away from the dated colonial study of periodization in literature that scans literary texts and canonical writers linearly through the centuries, the MA program offers innovative and challenging courses on Indian Literature, Contemporary Culture, as well as emerging areas such as Film Studies and Environmental Literature.

“I have taught literature all my life in Indian and foreign Universities. Nowhere in my experience have philosophy and social sciences been taught in an interdisciplinary way except in this school.”

UR Ananthamurthy

Eminent Kannada writer &
Jnanpith laureate

Masters in SOCIOLOGY

In our Sociology program, we seamlessly blend contemporary perspectives with classical theories. The courses offered facilitate first-hand engagements with diverse communities. Explore subjects like Gender and Society, Collective Social, Sociology of Kinship, and Social Anthropology. Our faculty, trained at leading universities in India and abroad, brings their expertise and specializations to create a teaching environment that is engaging, interactive, and intellectually exacting.

The program trains students to be resourceful, seek out the direct impact of their field-based projects, and engage with research-led practice.

Colours of Society and Kaleidoscope of Experiences

“MCH has an international reputation because of its extraordinary faculty who are committed to studying how mind, body, and society are co-constitutive, or bound together to form our ethical dispositions toward law, medicine, education, and economics.”

Carolyn Rouse

Professor of Anthropology,
Princeton University, USA

Masters in HISTORY

Whether your passion lies in unraveling the threads of social history, delving into development studies, navigating the nuances of gender, examining caste dynamics, or scrutinizing contemporary history, our department stands as a world-leading hub for teaching and research in these vibrant fields. The MCH History Masters program strategically equips students with skills to critically engage with diverse archives, spanning regional, national, and global contexts. This prepares them for nuanced historical analysis and impactful contributions in their chosen field.

Discover a varied and diverse community that is passionate about evolving approaches to history, complemented by a curated library and state-of-the-art facilities dedicated to advancing excellence in historical thought.

Every Historical Study Illuminates the Threads of Human Legacy

“MCH is asking its students to take as seriously as possible core questions in culture and power, across time – at present and through history – and space – in India and outside of India. It is demanding that they learn major works, both theoretical and empirical.”

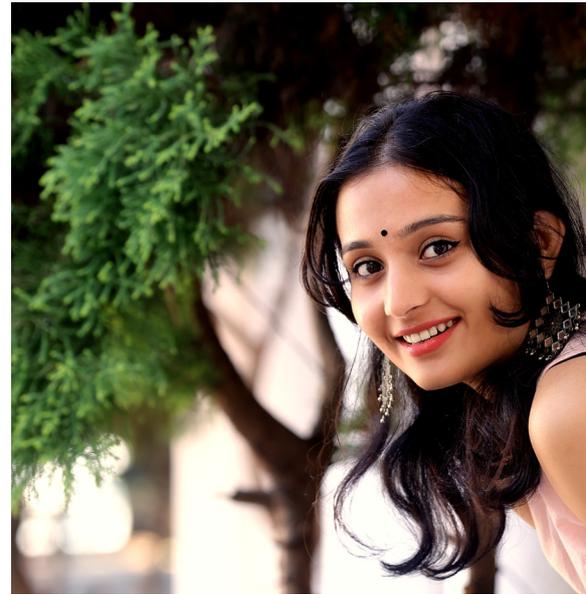

Sheldon Pollock

Professor of South Asian Studies,
Columbia University, USA

Clubs & Activities

MCH has a diverse student population from some of the best colleges across the country and abroad. The student community at MCH has access to several spirited forums such as the Film Club, Literary Club, Sports Club, Theatre Club, and Literary Journals, which are coordinated by the students themselves.

“The vibrant community and the exceptional guidance by the faculty mentors gave me the opportunity to explore in-depth my research interests in the field of literary craft and creative writing, often from a lovely window seat in the library with a view of the lake.”

Mariam Henna

MA English (2016-2018)

Find your very own COMMUNITY

MCH strongly believes in bringing out the best of each individual student, and helping them find their pathway to personal and professional success. To this end, it strongly encourages student initiatives, especially those that make for positive social and artistic impact, innovation and collaboration. The Centre also conducts workshops, internships, national and international conferences, summer schools, writing courses, and guest lectures by renowned scholars and artists.

Infrastructure

In addition to technologically equipped classrooms, MCH is home to a state-of-the-art auditorium, an exclusive art gallery, and an extensive humanities library

The Legacy of MAHE

The journey of Manipal Academy of Higher Education (MAHE) began in 1952 when Dr. T. M. A. Pai, the founder of Manipal, started India's first private medical school, the Kasturba Medical College (KMC). Today, MAHE hosts more than 300 programs across 31 disciplines. It has campuses at Manipal, Mangalore, Bangalore, Jamshedpur, Dubai, and Malacca. The University has been consistently ranked in various surveys as the No. 1 private University in the country.

“The craze for medical and engineering education must not be at the cost of vital subjects of arts, literature and philosophy.”

Prof Madhu Veeraraghavan

Pro Vice Chancellor Management, Law, Humanities & Social Sciences

MAHE has distinguished itself over seven decades in professional education such as medicine, management and engineering. However, best international practice has always had the humanities and the social sciences as the core of a university from where the professional courses spread organically outward. We are thus finally spotlighting this humanities core so that MAHE may proudly take its place among the most highly regarded educational institutions of the world.

I am delighted to present to you curated undergraduate and postgraduate programs at the Manipal Centre for Humanities (MCH). A handpicked faculty with an extensive national and international network offer courses on par with the very best in the world. This gives students a chance to feel that they are actively participating in an extraordinary expansion of their personalities as well as professional prospects. Beyond the varied skill sets the humanities and social sciences give directly, they also help lay firm foundations for careers in management, law, policy, diplomacy, and the many other fields that are currently proliferating.

A rich and satisfying life of the arts—theatre, music, visual culture—awaits students at MCH as they take their place as an essential and vivacious component of this student-filled, cosmopolitan, strikingly beautiful coastal town.
